

Machine Learning Basics

Machine learning is a subfield of artificial intelligence (AI).

It focuses on the development of algorithms that allow computers to learn from and make predictions based on data.

The three main types of machine learning are supervised learning, unsupervised learning, and reinforcement learning.

Supervised learning uses labeled data to train models, such as predicting house prices based on historical data.